These forage around to an amazing distance from the crown of the plant—15 feet is not unknown. These roots have a most discouraging and frustrating job to do. After scurrying around and gathering nutrients from far and near, they put them together into a nice plump bud, and no sooner has this bud pushed upward into the sunshine end air than a sharp knife comes along and whisks it away to be steamed and served on total with drawn butter sauce.

TRY AGAIN

There roots try again and again to push a plant up, but there comes a time exercitually when they begin to weaken and grow thin for want of one of the essentials of life—the element carbon.

There is a "law of the minimum" which operates in plant growth. It states quite simply that the amount of growth a plant may make is limited by the quantity of the essentials of least present in proportion. Writing in the Red Ink

THE stoppage of steel production which began in the United States at the first of this week may be of short or of long duration but its effects will be felt immediately. From here on the account will inevitably be one that can only be written in red ink. The loss per day in wages, loss in steel output and interference with related phases of industry over a wide field will all affect the economy of the United States directly, and that of Canada to a substantial, if lesser, degree. Both parties to the dispute blame the other side, and both have taken up seemingly unstantial.

ada to a substantial, it resser, uegice. Butting parties to the dispute blame the other side, and both bave taken up seemingly unyleiding positions. From these premises an early settlement does not appear probable. Apart from the growing monetary loss on both sides of the disagreement the halting of steel production could be a crippling economic blow on a continental-wide basis if the strike is prolonged. Railwide basis if the strike is prolonged. Railways, shipping on the Great Lakes, oil and natural gas development, construction, automobile manufacture and a long list of other things in this country as well as south of the border could be affected in a few days time unless a strike settle-ment is reached. Steel and its related inment is reached. Steel and its related in-dustries are so basic to the economy of this continent that there is no work stop-page which could have hurt more. The question now is how long the dislocation may continue. British Columbia unfortunately oc-British Columbia unfortunately occupies an exposed position in the present impasse; it has scheduled the largest program of construction work in its entire history, with only partial deliveries as yet of the necessary structural materials. The Pacific Great Eastern and a few other enterprises which contracted for steel in Europe may be lucky; although on the other hand much public and private construction dependent on the American market for structural supplies could be brought to a standstill. That is a situation which may prove a headache to public and private business alike.

Up to the end of last week Parliament showed no such final intention. The Opposition questioned Mr. Speaker's Opposition questioned Mr. Speaker's rulings in some instances in the bitter pipe-lines debate, but did not press the issue

Beaudoin followed the correct course in declaring his intention in the House on Monday, although his stated reasons may prove embarrassing to the administration, to Parliament and possibly to himself if this step only revives the wrangle.

While every man is entitled to make his own decisions, and Mr. Beaudoin has now confided in the Commons, the result may prove unfortunate for the administrative than the commons of the same proventions and the same confidence and th may prove unfortunate for the administra-tion, without any corresponding gain to the Opposition or any other group in Parliament. Regardless of the given reasons, this may come to be regarded as a sacrifice hit on the part of Mr. Speaker a sacrifice hit on the part of Mr. Speaker to save the face of the government. While he may have erred in some rulings in the heat of the pipelines debate. Mr. Beaudoin was not responsible for the administration's stubborn desire to force a discountry. puted bill on the Commons in a thoroughly unparliamentary way.

It is no secret, of course, that the official Opposition questioned, and had every right to question, some of the decisions which forced the pipelines bill thought the creamble. But they like cisions which forced the pipelines of through the assembly. But then the Opposition let that issue sleep. There has been time since for hindsight over a series of episodes which in a fundamental account of the administration of the administra series of episodes which in a fundamental way can be laid at the door of the administration, but not that of Parliament. As the servant of the House and not the government. Mr. Beaudoin has placed his resignation before Parliament and asked to be relieved of his duties in the chair. Fantasy Run Riot

HOLLYWOOD movie star, and a quite mediocre actor at that, has announced the terms of his latest contract. They are nothing short of fantastic. For acting in three pictures, each of them involving only a few weeks' work, he will be paid a cool two million dollars. This is economic absurdity run riot, even in a realm where fabulous salaries are the rule rather than the exception. No person alive is worth snywhere near that much remuneration, and the result can only be to twist all sense of values wholly out of proportion.

One observer is quoted as saying that one observer is quoted as saying that such wildly booming salary scales will kill the movie business; predicated on such a basis perhaps that might not be a bad thing. It might bring these celluloid "actors" to their senses instead of wallowing in riches they frequently do not know how to possess with the slightest tincture TV is often cited as the rea for current half-empty movie theatres, the reason may be related closer to the vast sums paid to so-called movie stars, which have to be extracted from the public box-

". of shors—and ships—and seal-ing wax—of cabbages and kings." By TOM TAYLOR SENTON BLAKE is so far remote

In time to me I had never ex-pected to see his name in 1956 print, but there it was, last week, in the respect able pages of Tor-onto's Financial Post, via the scratch pad of Napier Moore. Mr. Moore is seem-ingly of this column's vintage—and youth-reading habits — for he says that every time he refers to this invincible fic-tion detective his mailbag bulges and like his responsive readers, he must have nostalgic memories of penny-dreadful days.

This was the label' pinned on the literature of countless small boys who lived week by week in a fever of articipation. What would Sexton Blake be up to next? Or, more correctly, what would some villian George Marsden Plummer, for instance, who resppeared periodically to plague the great Blake just as the Mangler does to annoy Rip Kirby. No jall was (is) sturdy enough to hold these pseudo criminals.

Ah me, what fun it all was, with the evergreen Tinker, all of 16 summers and never growing a day older and the faithful Pedra who unlike modern live bloodhounds never lost a scent, right ready to Sexton Blake's call Only when Tinker thought knew more than his master and sought to solve the mystery himself, in the fashion of lady assistants to district screen attorneys of today, did calamity tighten our throats so that we could not swallow.

Otherwise we had comforting con fidence that all would end well, for was not Sexton Blake a paragon of virtues-he could out-fight, outthink and out-dress if necessary any adversary, and without the aid of Penny dreadful! A penny, maybe but delightful and not dreadful at all. Even at this late date, when Blake if still putting a microscope to a if still purting a mirroratope ob bloodstained hair must be an active 102 years at least, it warms the heart to hear him praised and his detrac-tors properly rebuked.

For Mr. Moore, who had just come from the Royal Ascot enclosure and was in indegant mood, had unwisely called Blake "an incredible penny-dreadful detective" in the hearing of

"He was no more incredible," said the latter, indignantly, "and certainly no more penny-dreadful than the sleuths found in the current crime novels sold in drug stores as sopo-rifics for tired professors and bus-

And Sexton Blake deserved more leisurely attention. He brightened our days and, psychlatry being still among its complexes, left us un-

Reports from Ottawa

THERE'S a footnote to the roman-tic story of Arctic exploration in a request for $1,400 which is now before the House o

Under the heading of ."terminable serv the Department of External Af fairs is asking erection of a monu-ment at Steinkjer, Norway, in honor of the Arctic ex-plorer, Otto Sverdrup."

Capt. Sverdrup commanded the Second Norwegian Polar Expedition of 1898-1902 and made, in the opinion of present-day experts, a number of major contributions to knowledge of the Arctic, Chief among these was very of three large islands. west of Ellesmere Island, which he named in honor of the men who financed his expedition, Axel Heiberg and two brothers, Amund and Ellef Ringnes.

And who were these worthy gentle men who "angeled" the polar expedi tions of Nansen and Amundsen as well as that of Sverdrup? They were th E. P. Taylors of Oslo, the owners of the big Ringnes brewery. Had Mr. Massey been a patron of the Sverdrup expedition he surely would have with drawn his name!

Of coursel when Sverdrup found these islands he had no thought of adding them to the British Empire. Norway claimed them by right of dis covery, much to Ottawa's discom-fiture, and it wasn't until 1930 that Norway abandoned its claim in favor of that of Canada.

- In return the Norwegians asked that "no obstacles should be imposed to Norwegian fishing, hunting or industrial and trading activities in the area." Such a concession relating to these barren, uninhabited islands means little. But there was another part to the deal which was not identified as such.

That was the payment of $67,000 to Sverdrup by the Canadian government. Ottawa calls it an "ex gratia" payment, in recognition of Sverdrup's work in the Arctic. Officially all Canada got in return were Sverdrup's original diaries, notehooks and re-ports. Actually Canada got the Sverdrup Islands.

Sverdrup and his party of 15 scien tists and seamen aboard the little steamer Fram were extraordinarily thorough in their scientific explo and extraordinarily successful They caused Robert E. Peary considerable distress by intruding in an area which the American explorer had mentally appropriated for him-self. Peary was pioneering "an Amer-ican route to the Pole" when he and rse "interloper" met quite by chance in a lonely fjord of Ellesmere Island on Oct. 6, 1898.

Sverdrup, who added some 50,000 square miles to Canada, died a quarter of a century ago. Ellef Ringnes Jr., whose father's name lives on Canadian maps, is chairman of the Fram Society, which commemorates Sverdrup's work.

Recently Ringnes approached Chester Ronning. Canadian amhassador in Oslo, with the information that the Fram Society planned to erect a roonument in Sverdrup's home town next year, the 100th anniversary of the explorer's birth. Would the Canadian government care to contribute?
The Canadian government would.
And so wheels turned here in Ottawa.

to keep the farm houses; cattle men to handle the prize heasta; a house-keeper to look after the pretty little mansion the lord and master of the estate had contrived out of the best of the farm homes.

People would work for him for six months or a year and then simply walk out. He couldn't understand it. Fie paid excellent wages, maybe a little more than might be expected. He started with local people. He later employed people from distant coun-tries. Whatever was the trouble, they uld work a few months and then

At last he met, at a cattle sale do in the States, a Scotch manager of a farm similar to his own to v he took an immediate liking, and in-vited to come to Canada. The Scot-had been working 10 years in the States and thought he would like to come to Canada. He came. One condition he insisted on

"I am the manager. You, as owner, will not interfere in any respect with any of the people I employ."

"Why, certainly," agreed the city

Everything went swimmingly for a ar. But it is hard to be the owner of a rich estate and not want to throw your weight around a little bit. He tangled with a man driving a tractor. The driver told him where tractor. The division of the could go, a most revolutionary experience for a city financier. The Scotch manager came into the row.

"I pay them," declared the city

All Aboard For Mars

Fact or Fantasy?

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

S A MEANS of escape from the babbling confusion of politics and the clamor of wars and rumors of war, I have been reading the latest books on astronomy, especially those dealing with the moon and Mars, with wither of those orbs, for the visit either of those orbs, more I am convinced that, even if it were possible to reach the moon rocket ship, the occupants would be dead before they got there; or, if-living, would never return to tell

According to the prospectus of the would be space travelers, the moon is to be the first hop or stop on the trip to Mars, and according to scien-tific observations of that satellite it is an utterly dead world, void of atsphere or moisture. Its flat sur faces are deserts of fine dust of great depth and would hardly provide a safe landing place for a parachutist, much less for a heavy spaceship.

But there are much greater difficulties to contend with, such as the known fact that the temperature of the moon in the daytime rises to many degrees above boiling point, and at night descends to as many below zero. The lack of water or of oxygen is unfortunate, but they over all that for the time being and proceed as follows:

"When an observatory is built on the moon, the difficulties caused by an atmosphere will be largely overome, for the atmosphere of the moon is thin indeed, if it exists at all. It is generally agreed that, if and when nerally agreed that, if and when the an observatory is set up, it will be the greatest single advance that has ever been made in the history of a.eronomy."

Most of the preliminary explanations are peppered with "its" which conveniently span the gaps of space and time and slide over present fac-tual obstructions. We are assured that man has a marvelous capacity for invention and for adapting himself to apparently impossible condi-The chief thing is to get on with the story. The initial difficulty of a space-ship is that of getting away from the atmosphere and gravi of the earth; but we are told that the rocket can achieve this, and once the ship is out into free space all would be plain sailing.

The crew of the ship would be provided with modern household facilities, on a very small scale, of course, and the machinery for propulsion. steering, observation and communicasteering, observation and communica-tion by radio with the earth, to say nothing of fuel tanks, electric bat-teries, oxygen cylinders, and equip-ment for air-conditioning. This last is very important out there in that vacuum exposed to blaze of the sun on one side and sub, sub zero on the other. But the spaceship builders have got that and all other impossibilities figured out.

I have read and re-read the detailed descriptions of the interior of one of these rocket ships designed to take-off on a trip to Mars. As Lam not an engineer or an expert in elec-tronics. I am willing to take it for granted that there is every provision for keeping the crew alive in such close quarters, but I do not believe a dozen men could endure the physical and mental strain of such confin ment for six months, much less for a year and a half, which it is recked the journey to Mars we quire. The monotony alone would be sufficient to drive most men crazy, to say nothing of the physical disnfort and the psychological effects comfort and the psychological effects of so unnatural an existence.

As for the question of propulsion and steering in a vacuum, where there is nothing to push against, the explanations given seem to tastic. Even if the ship we ue in a direct course by inal impetus, it would probably go-into a spin and explode into gas; or it it remained intact might Join sorites that hurn then selves out in our upper atmosphere.

Anyway, having made this brief escape into vacuity, it is good to get back to solid earth where one can breathe and move about comfortably and when tired of pipeline politics an take a pocket trip to the quiet fishing waters. That's an idea.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

In the U.S. the National Broom Manufacturing Association suggests giving the bride a broom as a wed-ding present. Well, it would make an interesting conversation piece for a couple, one-half of which would have to have it explained to her what a broom was.

The lonely old tycoon walked des-pondently out of his club and hailed a tamb. He got in slowly and care fully. "Where to, sir?" the cab driver asked.

"Drive off a cliff," said the old man. "I've decided to commit suiside."

Concerning an article in Sunday's Colonist, "Play-ground Fun Starts Tuesday," I would like to draw your attention to the fact referring to Saanien playgrounds, the number of hours per day is correct, but the time is wrong as most parks operate from 10 a.m. to 12 moon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. There is very little variation in the time for the supervisor on the park. Then again, the supervisor has been withdrawn from Meadow and Rudd park. As I am the one responsible for the appointment of the supervisors after this case in the control of the supervisors.

Remember Your Pets

Now that the holiday season is here, we would ask people to remember their pets when going away on a yacation by making proper provision for their care. Cats in particular, are too often left to shift for themselves and when the owner does return from a holiday, he finds his pet missing. Neighbors cannot he expected to assume the sponsibility of someone class pet, thus it is better to hoard it unless there is someone retable to look after it.

Cats and dogs also suffer a great deal from first in warm weather so that a howl of clean water should be available to them at all times as they cannot make their needs known or turn on the tap when thirsty as we humans do.

Found Dollar Industry

Trade and Industry Minister Raiph Chetwynd says that sportsmen caught 265,200 saimon as compared to 527,100 taken by commercial trollers in the Gulf-of-Georgia; but he did not make clear that out of the sportsmen's total of 285,200 saimon a 122,000 were gribse. 48,000 were springs and 75,200 were coho. The last two, the coho-end-spring saimon are one of the main reasons that sportsmen and fourists come to our province to fish and spend-money and make the visitor a potential resident for future years; in fact it is an industry, with a found dollar and not subsidized and lorbised at the taxpayers' expense.

The commercial fishermen's catch is made up of 443,000 cohoes and 84,100 springs, bringing a total of 527,100 saimon for this same area; the mesh of their nets being a little too large to catch as percentage of total commercial esteh in the tidal waters of British Columbia is 14 percent. Which is not a very large percentage when one figures out the waters open to commercial fishermen, and the amount of money spent on sports fishing tackle, accommodations, sports fishing boats and pleasure eraft. The tourist industry will continue to be a found dollar and expand if both the federal and provincial governments come to recognize what recreation, tourist, sports fishing and game hunting means to our economy and arise out of their super, and set this fast growing industry under a department of thely own.

One point to note is that the grilse catch brings the percentage of the sports catch way up in comparison to the spring and cohoes, and these two species of fish mean so much more to the tourist and sports fishing industry that the sports fisherman has no way of catching such commercial net fish as the sports each way up in comparison to the spring and cohoes, and these two species of fish mean so much more to the tourist and sports fishing industry that the sports fisherman has no way of catching such commercial net fish as the sockeye, pinks and chums.

May I add that the tourist industry (sports fishing, houring of coal to the smelting of iron ore from the 17th century onward.

Hudson's Bay Point Blankets have been a pioneer article of trade since Canada's earliest days, Among the Indian tribes, it was a mark of distinction for braves and their wives to own these rich-

Point Blankets. The Hudson's Bay Company created the distinctive 'point' marks to designate size and weight, which soon became a loken of value in the fur trade country, each 'point' being worth the equiv-
